Summary: A poem about war. Not necessarily Animorphs, but inspired by them.

What We Did

What we did **

What we did

 The clock strikes twelve
>The caged bird sings
The blood keeps flowing
>The air lifts our wings.

>We fly through the night
Knowing what we did
>Our heads hang in shame
Of the guilt we try to rid
Blood has been spilt
>On that dreadful night
We will remember forever
>The never-ending fight

>In the heat of the chase
The pounding is heard
>But once it stops sounding
No one says a word
We know what we did
>We had no other choice
But in our soul will always
>Be a screaming angry voice

>Telling us we were wrong
Saying we should die
>For the crimes we committed
For which we did not cry
We now have what we sought
>The freedom we once lost
But at what price was it gained
>If innocence was the cost

>In this world there is justice
And those laws do dictate
>An eye for an eye, a life for a life
And so, I accept my dire fate
With my hands that once killed
>I take another life
This time it is my own _
>My blood that stains the knife
